ATLANTA, May 14, 2026 — Atlanta’s High Museum of Art will be the last stop on the national tour for “Amy Sherald: American Sublime” (May 15-Sept. 27, 2026), the acclaimed mid-career retrospective for the Georgia native and the largest exhibition of her work to date. Featuring more than 35 paintings made from 2007 to 2024, the presentation will include many of Sherald’s most iconic works, along with rarely seen paintings spanning her career.

Born in Columbus, Georgia, Sherald has deep ties to Atlanta and to the High. She trained as a painter in the city and graduated from Clark Atlanta University. In 2018, the High awarded her its annual David C. Driskell Prize in African American Art and Art History, the first national award to recognize the importance of African American art. In 2022, the museum presented “The Obama Portraits Tour,” featuring her renowned portrait of former First Lady Michelle Obama, which will be on view in “American Sublime.” Most recently, her work held pride of place in last year’s presentation of “Giants: Art from the Dean Collection of Swizz Beatz & Alicia Keys.”

“While Amy and her work have been present in Atlanta for many years, this will be the first opportunity to engage with the full measure of her practice,” said the High’s Director Rand Suffolk. “We’re really proud to share that with Atlanta while celebrating an artist whose work so strongly resonates with our community.”

“Bringing American Sublime to the High Museum is exciting because it is where my story began as a young art student in Columbus, Georgia,” said Sherald. “As a former Atlantan, I’m looking forward to returning to celebrate the cultural and artistic power that is born in this city.”

The High is the fourth and final venue for this exhibition, which is organized by the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art (SFMOMA), where it debuted in 2024, and which previously traveled to the Whitney Museum of American Art. The exhibition is on view now at the Baltimore Museum of Art (through April 5, 2026) before it comes to Atlanta.

“American Sublime” considers the important impact of Sherald’s work on contemporary art and on American culture, as she addresses the omission of Black figures from the history of figure painting. In addition to the Michelle Obama portrait, featured works include Sherald’s iconic portrait of Breonna Taylor for Vanity Fair magazine and the painting “For Love, and for Country,” which references Alfred Eisenstaedt’s famous photograph of a sailor kissing a woman in Times Square on V-J Day in 1945. The presentation will also include Sherald’s first triptych, “Ecclesia (The Meeting of Inheritance and Horizons),” created for the exhibition.

Timed Ticket Information

To see the critically acclaimed exhibition “Amy Sherald: American Sublime,” featuring her iconic portrait of First Lady Michelle Obama, opening at the High on May 15 for its last tour stop, visitors will need to reserve a timed, exhibition-specific ticket. Following the exhibition’s sold-out crowds at the Baltimore Museum of Art and overwhelming demand at the Whitney Museum of American Art, New York, visitors are strongly encouraged to secure tickets as early as possible.

Exhibition tickets, which will also include access to the rest of the museum, are $28.50 per person for not-yet-members ages 6 and over (except on Friday evenings and during High Frequency Friday or Friday Jazz events) and free for visitors ages 5 and under. All visitors to the exhibition ages 6 and older will require an exhibition ticket. Children ages 5 and under are admitted free of charge but are walk-up only and do not receive advance timed tickets.

The exhibition will be open after regular museum hours every Friday night throughout its run. For High Frequency Friday and Friday Jazz nights (the first and third Fridays of each month respectively), patrons can purchase special VIP tickets that include access to the exhibition and the musical events happening on those nights. Every other Friday night, visitors can purchase tickets for an exclusive viewing of the exhibition only. VIP tickets for Friday nights will also include a private bar with drinks for purchase and an exclusive VIP poster. VIP tickets for Friday nights are $40 for members and $55 for not-yet-members and will be available on the presale dates.

Admission to the exhibition will remain free on Access for All days and UPS Second Sundays but will require a separate, timed ticket. Tickets for the exhibition on those days can be reserved online on the program-specific pages one month before each program.
